Your Child Has Rights...

Dyslexia affects children while they are in school, but it also affects them as adults.

Meseret Kumulchew, a Starbucks employee in London, was recently accused of falsifying information about water and fridge temperatures, when in reality she simply misread the numbers due to dyslexia.

When she was fired, Kumulchew took Starbucks to court, claiming that she had made her employer aware of her challenges and they did not provide her with an adequate working environment to meet those challenges. The result of the case? Kumulchew won!

By law, many organizations and businesses are not allowed to discriminate against individuals with dyslexia. In addition, they may have a legal responsibility to accommodate any challenges. For example, colleges may allow extra testing time for students with dyslexia.

Windy Row is dedicated to giving children a head start with techniques that allow them to read at grade level and beyond. Call us at 924-7198.

Home Schoolers Welcome

At Windy Row, we welcome home schoolers who are struggling with reading and math. We recognize that everyone learns differently—in fact, we celebrate the benefits that those differences bring in creativity and fresh viewpoints. We also understand that parents aim for the best home school education, but may be frustrated by reading and math challenges.

A Father Thanks Windy Row

“My daughter was diagnosed with dyslexia at the age of 9, and we soon learned that the school system couldn’t accommodate her needs. We needed to find an alternative solution to help address her reading deficiency, and through a friend, we were referred to Windy Row.

“She attended for 1 year, twice a week. She worked very hard, but due to the caring and supportive nature of her tutors, she didn’t see it as work. She established a wonderful rapport with them, and I believe that relaxed relationship gave her the confidence and focus needed to succeed. She was convinced that this “challenge” of hers was not going to slow her down, and it hasn’t.

“Soon after her tutoring at Windy Row, she was the MC at the church holiday service conducted by the children. She stood at the pulpit, with numerous passages to read from the Bible (I can’t even get them right!), and never faltered. To the uninitiated, she was a star reader. That was one of the proudest moments in my life! She has since moved on to math tutoring, another difficult area for those with dyslexia due to their protracted processing time. But I know in my heart, with the assistance of Windy Row, she will overcome this challenge, too.”
